Atheism is dead in today's world, it died during the Soviet Union having a short span, it will never come back. Atheism is at 7%, it is really 2%. Agnosticism/atheism is said to be at 8% to 15% in America. I wager it is at 40%, the youth is automatic 40% I think they are at 50% to get an idea of how big agnosticism is getting. Agnosticism is what people resort to in today's word. People don't obey God that is why they are agnostic. This will show it.

Their response to everything is always "I don't know", yet they clearly will be agnostic their whole lives, so they must "know" agnosticism since Islam disproves agnosticism and they will never be a Muslim. They cannot claim they don't know if Islam is right or not, because they never converted. Allah told us Islam is the correct religion. They had no intent of ever converting.

If you are agnostic than you can claim your false god believes murder and adultery is acceptable or that it is just a theory that it is immoral to do. If you claim you have clear evidence that murder and adultery is wrong that your false god denounces it, then you are a Prophet you speak on your false god's behalf. That's how the concept of Prophets work. It is not an ancient Arabian concept that is out of date. The concept of a Prophet will be the same till the end of time and no, the concept of a Prophet will be the same till the end of time. The concept cannot possibly change even if America changed the definition of Prophet which America would do. The term Prophet is not exclusive to religion. It is a concept not a theory of religion. If you don't believe Prophets exist that's on you but you still believe you are a Prophet to go claiming there are no laws of life, and everything is a theory. You haven't accepted someone can be all right and someone can be all wrong. That would mean in their world 2 plus 2 equals 5. That is an absolute on this earth, yet I am told there are none. Also, if you claim we would never know what a god would want, you become a Prophet of some kind, that's how Prophethood works.

Since you are agnostic you must have all these horrific beliefs such as gay marriage, no capital punishment, and theft for society. An agnostic would say "no that's not what I believe", agnosticism encompasses it. An agnostic believes in gay marriage by default, no one is corrected for supporting gay marriage. Agnosticism/atheism always evolves, it takes leaps in the right or wrong direction. There is no hope for agnosticism/atheism at least in this current era since it is taking leaps in the wrong direction. Agnosticism/atheism has no goal or cause unlike monotheism and polytheism. If the goal is to achieve perfection, it wouldn't know perfection and it would be plagiarizing it from religion since Islam came before time. Another thing too is if you respond with agnosticism can be any goal or "I don't know" then it has no clear goal whatsoever. This does not make someone “open-minded” nor “creative”. Without a goal it has no direction, period. If the goal of agnosticism is to “be you” like someone told me, they are wrong that things are defined in this world such as banning gay marriage. When it comes to purpose of why someone is alive, agnostics say that you choose the purpose, that’s not at all how it works because let’s say you believe your purpose is to murder, you go to Hell for it. The agnostics will fall back and say “you cannot prove Hell exists and if it does how do you know Hell is bad or good”? Where are the agnostic radicals to try to corrupt the earth and that will work also that Hell is not bad at all when they die since they would go to Hell for corrupting the earth. Agnosticism clearly has no goal.

Agnostics keep changing their answers, this is to make you doubt the reality of religion. Everything is defined in the world, nothing keeps changing or updating. Can they name one thing that has changed or updated in the world since the beginning of time?

Agnostics put their hope in humanity, if humanity is failing on a widespread scale, it doesn’t affect them. That’s how removed from reality they are.

They will tell you that you tell them it is the only way. They tell you they understand themselves well enough that religion will not help them. They say they don’t know if hell will be bad, ok, or good. They will always say we can never be sure. They say they don’t know where they go as a way of saying I could be right I go to unicorns and you go to Paradise.

They can believe lying is acceptable.

They claim Islam isn’t correct on the basis alone that the Quran contains miracles and End Times prophecies, they look at nothing else about Islam. They act like they can dispute every detail in the Islamic faith claiming all of it such as being allowed four wives as a limit a man can handle as being a theory as they will tell you every time.

If you don’t have a holy book, there is simply no way of proving if you are moral or not.

When an agnostic says I haven’t been to Paradise so I wouldn’t know if it was amazing or not, paradise has whatever you can wish for in it. Anyone on the earth loves to show others their hobbies or interests. Paradise has an infinite number of hobbies and interests that will forever blow you away.

The agnostics will say we don’t know what makes someone a good person or not that it is not defined. It is very defined that if you torture animals you are not a good person.

All agnostics and atheists will say “I was not warned” on the Day of Judgement. It won’t hold up.

Spiritual means you believe in parts of all religions so long as it is “good”, not bound to one religion and one denomination. It can be both that a spiritual person could either believe the Bible is infallible or not. I am not one of these people. I am Suni Islamic. I do not take parts of the “buddhist religion” as part of my own faith. I also do not believe the Bible is infallible. When someone tells me they are spiritual, I believe most of the time they take part of the “third temple” which is the opposite of me. This is not to be confused with spirituality which means a connection with Allah. This is the same as agnostic.

Agnostics don’t know if they will die someday or not, they will keep chasing the ability to never die thinking some technology will come along to prevent death. No agnostic can disprove a technology will come along and end death. To an agnostic, when is it coming out?

The more America keeps expanding psychology between college courses, psych wards, medications given out, health advice on the internet, jobs for psychology, the more agnostic/ “spiritual” people you will get in society. In the future there will be many more agnostics, it breeds agnostics, nothing else. Generation Z is the least religious generation of all time. That’s not by accident or by design, that is a result of the way the country is run where they teach everything is a theory. I had thought wrong that Generation z doesn’t have the religious knowledge, whether they know the Bible and Quran or not beyond knowing a few verses that has nothing to do with it.

No matter what answer we give, it is not the answer they are looking for and then they will find a new question that we have a theory for which they will then say the answer we gave was not good enough again. It is an infinite loop, they just want to trap us Muslims that yes we don’t know every answer to life and that we cannot be expected to know them, nor can the agnostics expect to answer the questions so the agnostics expect to answer the questions so the agnostics somehow think they are right when they can’t convince me of agnosticism when they don’t have all the answers. See how I can put it back on them? They aren’t sure of agnosticism; I am sure of religion. They have to be 100% sure of agnosticism to convince others to believe that unless if their goal is to have people come and go which clearly it isn’t if they are debating me. Yes, I am saying you do not want people firm in agnosticism though you are. You can’t say “the miracles could have happened”, you ruled them out on the basis alone that you are debating me, please don’t lie. I’d love to ask these people who say we are still learning more about life and our views are constantly changing, what are you looking for? Where can it be found? Books, the news, life experiences?

Agnosticism is simply an accuse of your actions to not be held in account. We live in a world today where you are deemed mentally ill if you are a horrible person and a label like that won't stop anyone from being a horrible person. It can never run a society.

Since you cannot talk someone into atheism, you would talk them into agnosticism telling them to believe whatever you want and that someday science could confirm religion or deny it. Just say "no one knows for sure". This is not the Soviet Union where 60% are atheist and that's what you should pick to talk people into, atheism is gone and will never come back, polytheism won't pick up much so don't pick that either. Since you and I know Islam is a fact, that will guarantee you Hell talking people out of Islam. Talking people into Christianity and uniting the earth while being a law-abiding citizen of America probably won't get you to Hell.

Agnosticism means anything is possible except for Islam because Islam tells us that there is no other possibility but Islam. Agnostics do not want to give up believe in anything being possible, asking them to rule everything else out they will never do. Ironically, they have zero evidence of there being other gods or nothing happening when we die etc.

To agnostics who say "I don't know" to most things in life, you are not a credible witness. All you ever say is "I don't know". Why should I believe you when you say someone assaulted you? For everything else you had said "I don't know". I can't take your word that you did not start a fight. For some reason your testimony counts for this fight that happened, but with religion it is a response of "I don't know because I wasn't there for it". Why should anyone in the world believe you that you did not start the fight?

You can't be agnostic because we can prove Islam is a fact. To all the agnostics who say I need to see the proof, a book in which there is no doubt, there's your answer. The argument they try to make is that the miracles didn't happen as if they had some proof. We know there are laws of life, and they have to disprove that as well which they can't. They have to change the subject every time when brought up and they do that. Richard Dawkins says we cannot be sure if God exists or not and Richard said he is a 6 out of 7 for not believing in God. Richard, you have to disprove that God exists. Richard wants you agnostic because he knows you cannot disprove God. Saying that I could be right that God exists works in his favor because he claims we can't prove God exists. We can prove God exists Richard. You are a liar. If you are at a 6 out of 7 for not believing God exists than Richard that is on you, you didn't do your research at all to tell us for a fact if God exists or not. If you have doubts, that doesn't disprove Islam, that means you personally have not found the answer to your question yet, the answer exists you just haven't found it or only God knows the answer to that question you have. They believe not every question about life can be answered. They don't believe one answer can lead to all, yet it can. They believe truth can be both absolute and relative. That doesn't work where God exists for me and not for them. God is universal. This is another example where they don't believe the Quran is infallible. Every truth is absolute, there is no "half" truth. There has to be absolute truth because I drank a coke yesterday, it is true. Truth is relative for nothing. When you Google search relative truth, the example used is 2 plus 2 being neither right nor wrong, that should be a clear indicator that all of relative truth is wrong to deny something universal that all accept as a fact, you fail math if you write 2 plus 2 could equal 4 or anything. They believe there are theories that means there is relative truth, no. They count bacteria as an alien, no. Also, atheists you have to disprove that Quran 25:53 is talking about a halocline. What you must say is that this verse is referencing something else. People say are you sure about that as if it cannot be proven. They say it is out of the blue when I present my arguments. They believe you are pushing your beliefs when you present them because they did not ask first regardless of if that is what the conversation is about which they clearly don't want to have this means they are not at all interested. If I wanted to, I could push my beliefs, I am presenting my beliefs to them. They don't want to even talk about it, so it becomes pushing material on it after a paragraph worth of dialogue. There's no point for debate because the opposite doesn't want to agree on anything at all. It is just an argument, I know it isn't viewed as me pushing material, but it is still an argument that goes nowhere, it is discouraging. They go based on how they feel, and they keep "evolving" from it meaning they don't bother to make the case for what they believe. They believe you never learn if you keep the same beliefs, no. They don't want to give consistent answers because they claim the situation can change. They claim to constantly change what they believe, they don't. They believe the times keep changing that means their ideas have to keep changing, no. They believe if you don't change your beliefs then you don't learn meaning I have to change my beliefs throughout my life. What they are saying is because their beliefs are always changing, that means mine has to as well or else I am wrong, this has to be the stupidest thing I have ever heard in my life. I did learn, there is nothing else to be said, are you going to have to learn again how to play Call of Duty 2 on Xbox 360? If someone was 27 and not one belief of his changed no matter how minor it was where he lived to 80, I wouldn't think he is wrong in what he believes. Does it count that even he will change a few minor beliefs in his life? Is that enough change for them? They believe they need to learn material. Ironically, they have all the answers to the questions I have asked. They have enough answers whether they are right or wrong. Take for example Richard Dawkins, he's only written a few books on atheism, if there was endless material he'd have hundreds of books written to talk about atheism since his goal is to convince you he's right. They will never allow us to rule out socialism that it will never work meaning they will keep trying beliefs that don't work. To tie this in with religion, people think that pre martial sex legalization can work in the future when it cannot it has proven to never work you don't try it again, wow. Can I ask what things are constantly changing? I can't think of one. 2022 was the same as 2021 for me. Is it every 50- or 200-years things change? The first humans had seen everything to life. When life started all these ideologies had already existed in the world along with everything you can do. Someone may say technology changed everything, how? All technology did was make everything go viral worldwide. Technology didn't create new ideologies nor a new way to live life. Being on the computer isn't a new way of living. The same is with TV. Instead of going to an event, you watch the event on the TV. The event was still the same. To all these people who say we are still exploring life, what are you looking for? What have you found that I don't already know? What has been invented in the last 10 years that I simply must have to know about? Since the world is constantly changing to them and they are still revising everything they believe they will always say you cannot prove God exists. I take serious offense to this because each religions tells you what happens when you die. Islam will never "revise" the need for you to be good on the earth to go to Paradise. They've accepted that will never change in religion. Islam will tell you that you must be good on the earth, they will tell you we don't know to be good or not. Who will you trust on this? Islam is always consistent. These people will always keep changing saying well this generation you have to be good in order for the world to survive the next generation may not need to be good in order to survive, to me that is like lying.

If you are agnostic, you can do anything you want claiming you are right to have an abortion emblem in your car.

When an agnostic says we came from nothing I won't listen to them ever. Do agnostics seriously believe nothing gives us life? That doesn't make sense. That would be a miracle that life happens because of nothing. It takes an action to give us life. An agnostic is saying life just happens clearly they have no explanation. Life is reality. We are not in nothing, we are in the earth. How is that process how we came from nothing? An agnostic will say evolution and cells expanding. How does the cell exist? What is that process like? It has to be explained and shown how it is given life, we have life. What is nothing? Can an atheist explain that to me? What is the experience of nothing? All they can say is the experience of nothing is nothing or they can try to bail themselves out saying we have theories for it which they don’t.

If you were an agnostic you could just wish the worst things on humanity possible when they do things wrong or slightly offend you. It really is that simple how agnosticism can fail society.

The argument used by agnostics for any religion that any religion could be correct you just have one less god than every other religion doesn’t hold up anymore. We have archeology and we can fact check the claims made by scripture.

The argument every agnostic has come with in history is that they tell Allah to strike them with lightening for blaspheming him. My response is this, if there isn’t a deity, I have no reason to live, evolving from an ape is not enough reason to live for me life would still have no purpose. Agnosticism says “I don’t know” if there is a purpose. You have to be sure there is a reason to live, a cause.

Good luck telling me there is no thought put into why these events happened throughout history why I believe they are all used together to get us to an end goal. Why to this day, we still have wars. If you want to tell me Allah didn’t plan for people like Neil deGrasse Tyson, I won’t listen where over 4 billion people are in an Abrahamic faith. The way the atheists describe Neil to someone, you would think a Christian who watched one of his speeches would leave immediately so I would only have to assume Christians click out of his videos as fast at they can right? Another thing too is why does the fashion industry exist? Why do girls look cute, and guys look handsome? Is that by accident? Why is it that Islam is nearly the same as it was when Muhammad preached the religion? Think of how Muhammad said this is what you will be judged by meaning Muhammad will say I have given you everything that Islam will not confuse or divide people. Why is it that Christianity has changed so much? Why is it that in all senior class yearbook the students’ hobbies are simple and their motivational quotes are about achieving goals in life? Why not instead the students talk about drugs and alcohol and talk about life in a depressing manner?

Here's a stupid argument- why do you follow the religion of your parents? Why do agnostics follow the non-religion of their parents? But they are to be taken as credible we Muslims can’t?

People who deny God’s existence know God exists. They do this thinking they will live a better life being agnostic, thinking that religion isn’t giving them the answers they want. Either they are hurt, jealous, feel less, they didn’t get what they wanted out of life, or they weren’t satisfied.

Agnostics will keep changing the subject to find something you know little about to make you seem like you know nothing since agnostics expect you to have every answer. We have theories for some matters, that doesn’t mean we Muslims are wrong.

To all the people who say they’ve never been to Paradise or hell. That’s where you are going. You don’t have to believe it is better than the world we live in. At the end of the day you still will be going there so no it doesn’t matter what you think of it, your beliefs are false. The Quran gave the description of the Hereafter which answers the questions needed about it. Saying we cannot conclude if the Hereafter is anything like that is false, you are all wrong on this. It doesn’t matter if you have been to Paradise or Hell, that’s irrelevant, it is still where you go. Saying you don’t know the description is a lie, you got the description of the Hereafter. Allah wrote out what Paradise and Hell is like. Well, Allah could be right or wrong. Allah does not lie, Allah is not shy to tell you the truth. You don’t have to go to Paradise to believe it is perfect. The agnostics are trying to say you cannot possibly prove Paradise is perfect because you haven’t gone to Paradise. Muhammad has gone to Paradise and never hold a lie. Regardless, an agnostic can never prove Paradise isn’t perfect. The word Paradise means Paradise.

At any time, it can be one answer or another, but both answers are answers that support their agnostic beliefs. Muslims are forbidden from doing this.

Agnostics can be on “onlyfans”, this is proof they have no laws, and they dispute values.

They claim Paradise could be like Cape Cod. Paradise’s name is Paradise, that means perfection.

Agnostics do not know if there are absolutes in life but most agnostics say there are absolutes. Then they say there are absolutes in life but then they say you can’t prove the absolutes they had just claimed. That is denying what an absolute is. Nothing they say is consistent. My response is as a Muslim that you are always wrong to say no one can ever be right on anything.

Testimony is a theory to agnostics to them so they can never be trusted once they say they were beat up in a fight that they weren’t the aggressors.

Like you say we can never know for sure that means all court cases have to be closed because they can never be proven without video evidence.

No matter what if the agnostics saw Jesus for instance, they will say “it’s mental illness”. Just like the Quran says no matter what sign you give them they will never believe.

You either take Allah’s word or you don’t. A response of “I don’t know” isn’t valid here. Afterwards they say “I don’t know” if God exists.

If you don’t know anything as an agnostic, you cannot have an opinion for the Islamic faith for anything that the Islamic faith does. You cannot form a comment on wearing hijab. Your response would have to be “I don’t know” if a woman should wear a hijab or not. Do you see how this all ties in where no one will speak out against the wahhabs trying to distort Islam?

Atheists never speak of God, or they blaspheme him. Agnostics talk about religion a good amount and use religious terms to sound “hip”. Odd how it works. When an agnostic kept saying “oh god” I said, “why do you keep saying this when you are not sure”. If an atheist said that, he or she would then start insulting religion, agnostics will never insult religion. Agnostics say being Muslim wouldn’t be a part of who they are, but then they use religious terminology, I can’t understand this at all. If occasionally they did, I would understand completely like it just happens, but they use religious terminology a good amount. Agnosticism is so odd to me; this is an example of it.

Their approach is “I can never prove to you my beliefs exist; you can never prove to me your beliefs exist”. By saying that, you are saying there is a chance that their belief system can be right. This is agnosticism not Christianity. You’re a Muslim, their belief system is false! You have been given the complete truth with Islam. There is a reason why you are Muslim, and they are agnostic because no Christian could possibly say that Islam is correct, it would be a zero percent chance. There is a reason why someone is called a Christian or a hindu or a Muslim. You wouldn’t be called Muslim; you would be called “all”.

A stupid thing an agnostic says is that God “kind of” exists. Nope, that’s impossible, we live in God’s reality. That’s enough proof agnosticism is all wrong. An atheist wouldn’t say something so senseless.

Someone told me, we don’t know what Hell is like, no one can define it. Who else but Abrahamic faiths can explain Hell to you or has? Has someone else told you a different description of Hell that it is fun to go to? Who are these people who claim it? They are few and far between, in fact they are insane to even recommend Hell would be anything else. Billions of people for over 1700 years have told you exactly what Hell is like. Prophets have told you having been to it, Prophets claim Hell. Someone feels they can claim “well Hell could be something else”. I wonder, are you dumb? Hell comes from Abrahamic faiths like I have said, if someone comes along and says, “hell is like this”, you would be dumb to believe them. Has there ever been any society to tell you anything different about Hell? Look at the Mesopotamian societies how they spoke of Hell how similar it is to the Abrahamic faiths. So, you have to physically go there to Hell to know what Hell is like just to make sure it wasn’t something unexpected? What you are doing is coming up with your own testimony about something you cannot speak about, you have no credibility, you’re claiming billions of people aren’t credible speaking about Hell. For some reason the thought of being wrong never crosses their mind with this. What if they were the only person on the earth who thought Hell was different? Would they still believe it? I would think so. This might be the most ridiculous thing I have ever had to address.

If you are atheist or agnostic, you believe you have definite evidence that you are right or else you believe you are wrong. It isn’t “ongoing.” No one can pick atheism or agnosticism by saying “we need more evidence” they felt there was enough evidence to conclude atheist or agnostic. They could have picked any other belief.

Does that make sense to someone that we all go to our faith, so the Buddhists are reincarnated, the talmudists get the “third” temple, the Muslims go to Paradise. This is agnosticism.

To the agnostics who say, “why couldn’t I be god?” My response is you don’t even care for what is in Allah’s holy books.

“That’s just one interpretation”, does that apply to Paradise and Hell?

90% of agnostics believe that aliens exist claiming there is evidence that has yet to be discovered on other planets. They believe in life on other planets without evidence, they expect us Muslims to tell them they want to hear to believe in God.

An agnostic can no longer doubt if Prophets existed.
